a certain indication that the heavy flow of money to this point is at an end, and an opposite movement is to be expected, especially toward the south and west. The banks gained something like a million dollars from the interior movement for the week ending Saturday, but with exchange at a heavy discount. It is not likely this addition to excess cash will be continued. On the other hand preparations for the fall season are under way, and this should create a demand for money from mercantile sources.

The loans of the New York banks, while now at the highest point of the year, are still $27,000.000 less than at this time last year, but it is to be not-ed that the increase last year did not culminate until last in September, when an additional increase of $10,000,000 was made. If this year repeats the exper-tence of last season, the firmness of the money market would seem assured. Since the talk of another bond issue is popular, it might be well to call atten-tion to the 'act that of the millions that have been taken from the treas-ury since February S, little if any of the amount has found its way in New York hanks, their total specie holdings at present below only 25000000 more York banks, their total specie holdings at present being only $3,000,000 more than the low point reached after their payments for bonds had been complet-

The majority of these people are second rate, and you must be careful not to form intimacies that will be inconvenient next winter that will be inconvenient next winter in New York. The X's, and the Y's, are well enough, you would better keep with them altogether."

In this way the "smart set" at B. was formed, and became very exclu-sive, indeed, while those who composed it tasted for the first time in their lives the sweets of supremacy.

"What airs these people assume!" exclaimed a transient visitor to B., one who in her turn considered that her social position gave her a right to criticise. "Do you mean to tell me it is really the A's, and the X's, that are speken of with such respect? How nice give up all this importance when they go back to town! It is the funnlest sengo back to town! It is the funnisst sen-sation to feel myself patronized by these people whom I really hardly know. "I have two young girls of 18 in my house," said a good and benevolent woman. "One is cheery and happy and patient, pleased with the smallest trifle, grateful for the least kindness, while it is taken as a matter of course that her entire time, from morning until night, day after day, without ceasing, should be devoted to the service of others, without expecting either thanks or favor. The other, although born with an equally good disposition, is uncertain in her temper, lives a self-absorbed and therefore selfish life, and is continually complaining because she has not as many luxuries as certain of her friends. One of these girls is a housemald and the other is my niece. I often think of the contrast between them and wonder at the unfalling good humor and cheerfulness of the former."

At least this is the type always found upon ideal forms of beauty executed when Greek art had attained its highest point of excellence. This dainty little member is full of expression too, and when its sublictles are understood is no less indicative of character than the hand. When rounded at the top, for example, like the small end of an egg its fair possessor has a lovable and romantic disposition. If however the hem be flat, as if pressed down, she is more or less fickle and inclined to filrt. When you see an ear that is quite round, look out for defective reasoning qualities, a limited sense of justice, and their too frequent exponent, lealousy.

that is quite round, look out for defective reasoning qualities, a limited sense of justice, and their too frequent exponent, Jealousy.

An oval car, with the lobe distinctly marked, is indicative of great ideality and sensitiveness. But if the lobe is altogether unmarked, and the ear widens at the top, it indicates a seifish and revengeful disposition. A small excrescence on the inner rim of the ear at the top shows a combination of seifishness and obstinacy, while an indentation at the same point denotes irritability, quick temper, but a generous and impulsive nature. Vanity, arrogance and concelt are to be looked for in large cars, drooping at the top, and without a hem.

Poets, palniers, sculptors and people of highly organized temperaments generally have small ears though the ears of muscians are usually rather largely developed especially in the uppr part, as notice in the portraits of Beethoven, Mozart, Wagner, Schubert and others. They are, nowever, regular in shape, Indeed a well-shaped car goes with a high bred temperament and is but rarely found on a vulgar person. Literary men have ears of every size and kind. Dr. Johnson's, for instance, were as colossal as were his genius and ponderosity.

Well-formed, large ears, with well-shaped hem show strength of will and temacity of purpose.

A finely shaped, large ears, with well-turned, round hem is regarded as the typical ear for a gentleman and indicates strength of will and extravagance. Misers never have ears of this type. Statesmen too have notably large and regularly shaped ears.

Evil passions and a strongly marked animal nature were represented in Grecian sculpture by a fawn or goat-like ear.

It is only among the more refined and divilized neonles that small ears upon

It is only among the more refined and civilized peoples that small ears upon women are considered pretty and a mark of aristocratic distinction. The Chinese, who admire little eyes and feet look upon long, large and drooping ears as marks of beauty; and certain other peoples bore their ears and enlarge the holes until they can insert quite a nosegay in them, and are as justly proud of this decoration as the young woman of a different civilization who drags down a pretty car into unmatural proportions with heavy jewels.

There are rumors from Paris that the Greek walst is coming, that the fashionable dressmakers are giving their customers to understand that their ideals are changing, and that there is to be no more tight lacing. This, if true, must mean that there are to be notable changes also in the cut and fashioning of gowns.

During the past winter and spring more tight lacing has been observed here and abroad than for many a year. It will be pleasant to note the disappearance of these abominably ugly, stiff and ungraceful little walsts. A small walst, if small by nature may be lithered and neat, and trig, but a waist laced
